Re-read Text C, This is going to hurt, in the insert and then answer Question 3 on this question paper.

Question 3

Imagine you are Adam. After reading your diaries, you write a letter to your parents reflecting on your time in medicine and your decision to quit.

In your letter you should explain:

- why you went to medical school and what medical training was like
- the challenges involved in working on the wards as a junior doctor and how you felt about the job at the time
- why you felt you had to give up and your feelings as you look back now.

Write the words of the letter.

Base your letter on what you have read in Text C, but be careful to use your own words. Address each of the three bullet.

Write about 250 to 300 words.

Up to 15 marks are available for the content of your answer and up to 10 marks for the quality of your writing.

Dear Mum and Dad,

I am writing this letter to you, to tell you about my time in medicine and why I decided to quit. I found a few of my diaries from a few years ago and I want to let you know why I made the choice.

In reality I still consist of a realisation I even wanted to be a doctor. I just feel like some dad was a doctor. I had to be sure to make you proud. Both of you proud. As dad would already know training is difficult. I never knew how complicated the human body really is.

1 The candidate opens with an appropriately polite and informal greeting for a personal letter to his parents.

2 There is a clear sense of purpose from the opening of the letter. Details from the introduction and task are carefully noted and used by the candidate to help think themselves into the role and adopt the perspective of Adam, some years later, as he looks back on the events described in the text.

3 The fact that his father is a doctor is explicit in the text and the idea is used here in the candidate's own words as part of the explanation for why he went to medical school. The point is then developed with the suggestion of Adam's feelings, picking up on the implications in the text.

4 The sense of audience is still being maintained and the voice continues to be convincing and appropriate.

5 The sense that there is so much to learn at medical school is suggested and might have been developed further.
