When the war started: who conquered and who conquered?

On the 1st of September 1939, Germany invaded Poland within a night; two days later, Neville Chamberlain (then Prime Minister of the UK) announced war on the 3rd of September. Because of Adolf Hitler's malicious attack, Britain's allies were determined to fight for but they were determined to win. Germany's allies were also not powerful but Britain remained in.

The evacuation boosted the morale of the British public. Some people suggest that it was a success because the soldiers used teamwork and creativity - which is shown in source 1. Moreover, Britain had a high chance of winning a victory. You was more from the fact that they were a success; they were brave and persistent in their survival.

Dunkirk was a military disaster - and took the British public by surprise - but almost at once, victory was being planned from defeat and the newspapers began to manufacture the British myth. The government encouraged it to flourish - and offered nothing to be published which might damage morale. Dunkirk was a military defeat but a propaganda victory.

was a disaster: it had many fatal failures.

In contrast, many people believe that Dunkirk was a 'miracle'. Evidence to show this is weapons were left behind, clothes were destroyed, no transportation and Winston Churchill quoted 'This is the last military aspect'. Evidence to show this is source 2. This shows that Dunkirk
