Ways of the World: A Brief Global History with Sources

1. What were the four dimensions of European imperialism that showed how China, the Ottoman Empire, and Japan were active participants in the global drama of the 19th C. world history and not merely passive victims or beneficiaries?

- They faced the immense military power and political ambitions of rival European states.
- They were enmeshed in networks of trade, investment, and sometimes migration that radiated out from an industrializing and capitalist Europe to generate a new world economy.
- They were touched by various aspects of traditional European cultures, as some among them learned French, English, or German language; converted to Christianity; or studied European literature and philosophy
- Asians and Africans engaged with the culture of modernity—its scientific rationalism; its technological achievements; its belief in a better future; and its ideas of nationalism, socialism, feminism, and individualism. (Original: p. 560; With Sources: p. 878)

2. In what ways did the Industrial Revolution shape the character of 19th C. European imperialism?

- The enormous productivity of industrial technology and European's growing affluence now created the need for extensive raw material and agricultural products.
- Europe needed to sell its own products and saw the social benefits to foreign markets.
- Imperialism promised to solve the class conflicts of an industrializing society while avoiding revolution or the serious redistribution of wealth. (Original: p. 560-561; With Sources: pp. 879-880)
