COMMENTS

High levels of bicarbonates will increase soil pH through a liming effect, especially in association with sodium. When used for flowers or hydroponic crops, high quantities of acid will be required to neutralize. > High potassium levels can be considered as fertilizer programs. Can cause deficiency of Mg and Ca due to induced nutrient imbalances > High sodium content may produce harmful levels of exchangeable sodium in most soils and will require special soil management. > High levels of manganese are toxic to plants especially in acid soils. > High turbidity levels indicate the presence of suspended material. It indicates possible bacterial contamination and can cause clogging of irrigation systems.
