

A strategic plan template

1. Name of the organization

The first component is always the name of the organization, followed by the date the plan was created.

2. Mission and vision statements of the company

The second is reaffirming the mission and vision statements of the company. This is important because it puts everyone on the same page. The strategic plan form also includes a list of the key team members. This includes those most involved in determining strategy, which include the CEO and usually most of the critical executives.

3. Analysis of the company

The third major component is an analysis of the company. This is where the strategy really comes into play. Some strategic plan forms will start with strength analysis. It is usually a good idea to start such a planning meeting on a positive note. The next subject will often be opportunity analysis. The team looks at identifying the biggest opportunities available and how the firm can best take advantage of them. The strategic plan form then looks at how weaknesses could prevent the firm from realizing an opportunity.

4. Analysis of the corporate environment

The fourth component is analysis of the corporate environment. The strategic plan offers a rubric on threat analysis. This is where the planning team looks at competitors, their capabilities, and their likelihood to capitalize on common opportunities. The next phase is to broaden the perspective to the whole industry. A deep analysis of the context in which the company play can offer insights on trends and promising new avenues. To contextualize this external analysis back to the firm, the last phase looks at marketing. Most strategic planning templates will suggest a section on marketing. This is where the team can focus on the lesson learned from industry trends and new opportunities. In this stage, the planning team develops a plan to interact with potential customers and the industry at large.

5. Goals

Most strategic plan forms conclude with goals. Every good planning meeting has a comprehensive list of actionable items and clear objectives. These are usually outlined one month, one quarter, one year, and five years out. Planning on a short to long timeline helps keep a holistic perspective of the strategy.

6. Executive summary

The document ends with an executive summary of the strategic planning form.

Fiscal Year 2002, A Review of the U.S. Global Change Research Program's Draft Strategic Plan National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Board on Environmental Change and Society, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Board on Atmospheric Sciences and Climate, Committee to Advise the U.S. Global Change Research Program, 2012-02-13. The U.S. government supports a large, diverse suite of activities that can be broadly characterized as global change research. Such research offers a wide array of benefits to the nation in terms of protecting public health and safety, enhancing economic strength and competitiveness and protecting the natural systems upon which life depends. The U.S. Global Change Research Program (USGCRP) which coordinates the efforts of numerous agencies and departments across the federal government was officially established in 1990 through the U.S. Global Change Research Act (GCRA). In the subsequent years, the scope, structure and priorities of the Program have evolved. For example, it was referred to as the Climate Change Science Program (CCSP) for the years 2002-2008 but throughout the Program has played an important role in shaping and coordinating our nation's global change research enterprise. This research enterprise in turn has played a crucial role in advancing understanding of our changing global environment and the countless ways in which human society affects and is affected by such changes. In mid-2011, a new NRC Committee to Advise the USGCRP was formed and charged to provide a centralized source of ongoing whole program advice to the USGCRP. The first major task of this committee was to provide a review of the USGCRP draft Strategic Plan 2012-2021 referred to herein as the Plan which was made available for public comment on September 30, 2011. A Review of the U.S. Global Change Research Program's Strategic Plan addresses an array of suggestions for improving the Plan ranging from relatively small edits to large questions about the Program's scope, goals and capacity to meet those goals. The draft Plan proposes a significant broadening of the Program's scope from the form it took as the CCSP. Outlined in this report, issues of key importance are the need to identify initial steps the Program will take to actually achieve the proposed broadening of its scope to develop critical science capacity that is now lacking and to link the production of knowledge to its use and the need to establish an overall governance structure that will allow the Program to move in the planned new directions The Quality Infrastructure Sarah Anne Murphy,2013-11-04
