Laidler, 2013-11-11 I have watched with growing concern the slow progress in matching new knowledge to clinical practice In fact as more research is undertaken and the frame of reference opens out to encompass the wealth of related but hitherto neglected issues the gulfs are widening between academic researcher specialist practitioner and the patient As a member of the British Stroke Research Group the British Society of Gerontology and relevant special interest groups of my own profession and as a clinical practitioner specializing in and teaching stroke rehabilitation the need to bridge these gaps becomes increasingly urgent This book endeavours to provide some of the missing links in a logical format designed for all medical and related health care professionals and yet which does not exclude other interested readers Don't skip the Introduction it answers some of the obvious questions and explains the layout and language My thanks go to all the stroke survivors and their families and friends who taught me to question myself and my treatments and to the many sources of expertise with whom I work or to whom I looked for their enlightened and specialized experience 400+ Interview

Everyday Life: Assessment and Basic Competencies David E. Tupper, Keith D. Cicerone, 2012-12-06 For a period of some fifteen years following completion of my internship training in clinical psychology 1950-1951 at the Washington University School of Medicine and my concurrent successful navigation through that school's neuroanatomy course clinical work in neuropsychology for me and the psychologists of my generation consisted almost exclusively of trying to help our physician colleagues differentiate patients with neurologic from those with psychiatric disorders In time experience led all of us from the several disciplines involved in this enterprise to the conclusion that the crude diagnostic techniques available to us circa 1945-1965 had garnered us little valid information upon which to base such complex differential diagnostic decisions It now is gratifying to look back and review the remarkable progress that has occurred in the field of clinical neuropsychology in the four decades since I was a graduate student In the late 1940s such pioneers as Ward Halstead Alexander Luria George Yacorzynski Hans Lukas Teuber and Arthur Benton already were involved in clinical studies that by the late 1960s would markedly have improved the quality of clinical practice However the only psychological tests that the clinical psychologist of my immediate post Second World War generation had as aids for the diagnosis of neurologically based conditions involving cognitive deficit were such old standbys as the Wechsler Bellevue Rorschach Draw A Person Bender Gestalt and Graham Kendall Memory for Designs Test Sickle Cell Disease in Clinical Practice Jo Howard, Paul Telfer, 2015-02-12

Sickle Cell Disease is the most common genetic disease world wide and in the UK It has marked geographical variation in its distribution in the UK with a concentration in London and other major conurbations Birmingham and Manchester In these areas specialist centres have become established offering expert up to date care for both inpatients and out patients with Sickle Cell Disease Although patient numbers are increasing outside these areas the expertise of health professionals can be patchy This book aims to provide a user friendly accessible resource for areas with smaller numbers of patients to allow them to provide equitable care with the larger well established centres Sickle Cell Disease can be associated with acute life threatening complications when clear easily available advice is needed and with chronic long term complications which may need liaison with other health professionals Clear treatment protocols for all the common complications of sickle cell disease are outlined here with summaries of key evidence and references
