The Roots of Conflict

People who wanted to live in a constitutional republic founded the United States of America. They wanted a nation in which the people made decisions about who would lead the government and how the leaders would operate it.

At the Constitutional Convention in 1787, delegates spent a great deal of time planning how the government of the United States would work best. Not everyone agreed. The Founding Fathers disagreed about the amount of power the federal government should have. The Constitution cleared matters up a bit. It explained how the rights and responsibilities of the federal government differ from those of state governments.

Members of the Federalist party supported the idea of a strong central government. Members of another political party, the Democratic-Republicans, believed that states had the right to nullify (cancel or declare invalid) federal laws they believed were unconstitutional. They thought this allowed states the right to declare laws unconstitutional especially concerned that the federal government might try to control slavery in the South. Southerners also accused the government of favoring the North. Tariffs (import/export taxes) helped the Northern manufacturing economy. Southerners felt the federal government was forgetting them.

As time went on, great differences were seen between the North and South. The economies of the two were different. The North made money in industry, while the South benefited from an agricultural economy. Most of the population in the North lived in large cities. The people in the South mostly lived on farms or in small towns. Many people in the North supported a strong federal government while most Southerners believed each state should have the right to make certain decisions for itself. The differences became more noticeable as the century went on. Soon it seemed that there could be no peaceful negotiation of disagreements.
