

The propellant of this cartridge contains a specially producing agent for one special meeting period.

The projectile consists of a hollow steel forging with a hemispherical nose, a streamlined ogive, and spinning vortical rotating band. A base cover is welded to the base of the projectile for added protection against the entrance of hot gases from the propelling charges during firing. The propellant cavity is filled with it instantaneously in 500 (thousandths) of a second later. A steel nose adaptor, having a female nose thread, with a proven filled booster casing is threaded into the nose of the projectile providing a seal for the fill. A tapered booster charge is placed inside the booster casing and a PC nose threaded into the adaptor. The cartridge case contains a percussion primer assembly and seven individually tagged and numbered propelling charge increments. The base of the cartridge case is drilled and the primer assembly pressed into the base. The percussion primer assembly consists of a percussion ignition element and a perforated flash tube containing black powder. The seven numbered increment bags are tied together, in numerical order, with service cord. These are assembled
