THE WHISPERING SHADOWS

On a chilly October night, as the wind howled through the trees along Willow Creek, the old Thompson house stood dark and quiet. It was time to go home, especially on Halloween. The townpeople often told stories of legends whispered of shadows that moved in the night, voices that could be heard even when no one was there.

Derek and his friend Liam had heard these stories at their school. They were too scared to visit the old house, but on this Halloween night, they decided to go. They were too curious to resist. They walked to see if the stories were true. As they crept up the creaking stone steps, a strange feeling came over them. The door opened on its own, revealing a dark hallway. The shadows on the walls seemed to move. Derek and Liam took a step back, their hearts pounding. In the dim light, they saw portraits on the walls of people who had lived in the house. As they walked further into the house, the whispers grew louder. At first, they thought it was just the wind, but then they heard voices. A shadow stretched across the hallway. Liam whispered, "Did you see that?" Derek whispered, "No, but I feel it." Before Derek could answer, they heard footsteps. Not their own. A woman in a long, patterned dress, her hair black and wild, seemed to float above the ground. Her face was not a face, but a void. "You shouldn't be here," she murmured in a voice that seemed to come from the walls. "Leave now." Derek and Liam turned and ran, their hearts pounding. When they reached the street, they looked back. The house was dark and silent once more. No one believed their story, but they knew it was true. And they never returned to Willow Creek.
