These two sets of results together represent some key findings for future research. First, the results on perceived stress and on attitudes toward the police suggest that international students in the United States are feeling a level of stress that is not only higher than that reported by students in other countries, but also higher than that reported by students in the United States who are not international students. This is a finding that needs to be taken into account by future research.

It is important to note that the Commission is not a government agency. It is a private, non-profit organization that is funded by the public and private sectors. The Commission's mandate is to ensure that the public interest is protected in the development and use of the land. It is responsible for the preparation and implementation of the land use plan, and for the monitoring and evaluation of the plan's implementation. The Commission is also responsible for the resolution of land use disputes and for the enforcement of the land use plan. The Commission's work is essential for the sustainable development of the land and for the protection of the public interest.
