Self-levelling refers to a suspension system that maintains a constant ride height of the vehicle, regardless of load. Toyota has been using their system called Active Height Control (AHC) Suspension since 1998 in the 100 series Land Cruiser and the Lexus LX470 and LX570. This article will give an overview of its operation, common issues, pressure relief and bleeding procedure.

Operation

Citroën was the first to introduce self-levelling suspension using a hydropneumatic system in 1955.

These systems use a combination of pressurised oil and gas to provide a sensitive, dynamic and high-capacity suspension, that offered superior ride quality on a variety of surfaces. Similar systems have been made under licence by many manufacturers. Toyota is one of these.

Hydropneumatic self-levelling suspension uses the combined advantages of hydraulic systems which use incompressible liquids inside a closed system, to transmit pressure and force, and pneumatic systems that use a compressible gas to act as highly efficient spring and shock dampener.

The hydraulic part of the system uses an electrically driven pump to raise and lower the vehicle by varying the volume of fluid in the hydraulic circuit. See Diagram #1. This fluid also transfers the road forces from the suspension to the pneumatic elements of the system.

These pneumatic elements use nitrogen gas as a spring medium which is approximately six times more flexible than traditional steel springs. The Toyota / Lexus suspension looks like a conventional system as it still has torsion bar springs at the front and coil springs at the rear with what looks like shock absorbers on each corner. However, these springs are lighter than on vehicle variants without AHC suspension, as the nitrogen-filled spheres or globes on the Damping Force Control Actuators on the chassis rails are acting as the springs and shock absorbers.
