Why We Forget and How to Remember Better Andrew E. Budson, Elizabeth A. Kensinger, 2023. One of us, Elizabeth, had the opportunity to conduct research with a gentleman named Henry Molaison, better known by his initials H.M. 1, who had the interior portion of his left and right temporal lobes, the part of your brain next to your temples, removed in 1953 because of epileptic seizures that were difficult to control. From a technical standpoint, the surgical procedures went fine. But as he recovered, the doctors and researchers soon noticed something very troubling: he was unable to form any new memories. He could read and talk, and if you were having a brief conversation with him, you would probably not notice anything amiss. But family members would visit, and although he knew who they were, he would have no memory of them coming. New doctors would introduce themselves, and the next day or even the next hour, he did not recall that he had met them. It was then that the doctors understood that somehow the removal of those parts of the temporal lobe caused him to become completely amnesic.

The First We Can Remember Lee Schweningen, 2011-11-01. Looking over the great prairie in the early 1880s, Nellie Buchanan said, "I knew I would never be contented until I had a home of our own in the wonderful West." Some were not so sanguine. Mary Cox described the prairie as "the most barren, forsaken country that we had ever seen." Like the others whose stories appear in this book, these women were describing their own thoughts and experiences traveling to and settling in what became Colorado. Sixty-seven of their original first-person narratives recounted to Civil Works Administration workers in 1933 and 1934 are gathered for the first time in this book. The First We Can Remember presents richly detailed, vivid, and widely varied accounts by women pioneers during the late nineteenth century. Narratives of white American-born, European, and Native American women contending with very different circumstances and geographical challenges tell what it was like to settle during the rise of the smelting and mining industries or the gold rush era, to farm or ranch for the first time, to struggle with unfamiliar neighbors, food and water shortages, crop failure, or simply the intransigent land and unpredictable weather. Together, these narratives, historically and geographically framed by Lee Schweningen's detailed introduction, create a vibrant picture of women's experiences in the pioneering of the American West.

Remember Me, and I Will Remember You Tallal Alie Turfe, 2016-11-09. When we think about something we need, we usually cannot overcome that thought until the perceived need is satisfied. For example, if we need food or water, our minds constantly think about how hungry or thirsty we are until we have something to eat or quench our thirst. Similarly, one who understands how much he or she is in need of God will constantly think about God. When we have faith and the desire to receive God's grace and mercy, we will turn to the
