

Security Model in Secure Key Agreement

Security Definition

Consider a secure key agreement protocol that takes as input two random bits and outputs a shared secret key. The security of this protocol is defined as follows:

Let $\mathcal{A}$ be an adversary. We say that $\mathcal{A}$ is secure if, for any polynomial p , there exists a constant c such that, for any polynomial p , the probability that $\mathcal{A}$ can distinguish between the two cases (the shared secret key is 0 or 1) is at most p . In other words, the probability that $\mathcal{A}$ can distinguish between the two cases is at most p . This is the security definition for secure key agreement.

More formally, let $\mathcal{A}$ be an adversary. We say that $\mathcal{A}$ is secure if, for any polynomial p , there exists a constant c such that, for any polynomial p , the probability that $\mathcal{A}$ can distinguish between the two cases (the shared secret key is 0 or 1) is at most p . This is the security definition for secure key agreement.
