1. Even though a nursing assistant notices that an older patient's oral intake has been poor since being admitted to the care area, the assistant is not concerned since "older people don't need to eat much anyway." How should the nurse respond to this assistant's comment?

- A) "That's a myth actually; older adults have increased caloric and nutritional needs."
- B) "Actually, older adults who are sick require more calories than younger people do during their recovery."
- C) "You're right, but it's still important that we provide vitamin supplements especially when a patient is recovering from an illness."
- D) "Even though it is true that older people don't need quite as many calories as younger people, they need as many nutrients as you or I." - Ans: D

Feedback: While caloric need does decrease with age, nutrient requirements are relatively consistent across the life span. Older adults do not have increased caloric and nutritional needs. Older adults who are sick do not necessarily require more calories since the basal metabolic rate declines 2% for each decade of life. Vitamin and mineral supplements for older adults are undetermined.

2. A health-conscious resident of an assisted living facility is promoting the value of fiber to a fellow resident. Which statement made by the resident about the benefits of fiber is accurate?

- A) Improved bowel activity and increased metabolic rate
- B) Improved bowel activity and decreased serum cholesterol
- C) Improved gastric emptying and prevention of colon cancer
- D) Increased nutrient absorption and decreased glucose tolerance - Ans: B

Feedback: Fiber is noted to lower serum cholesterol and promote good bowel activity. It is not noted to improve nutrient absorption or gastric emptying or to increase overall metabolic rate.

3. During a home visit, the nurse is asked by an older couple if vitamin and nutritional supplements can compensate for poor food intake. What should the nurse respond to this question?

- A) "Supplements can be useful but avoid those that contain calcium."
- B) "The risks of excess dosages mean that supplements are best avoided entirely."
