YOU ARE NOT A GADGET

A MANIFESTO

It's early in the twenty-first century, and that means that there would still mostly be word by computer — documents on words under command of people who are no longer sitting at keyboards. The words will be entered into automated search-engine keyboards within infinitesimal cloud computing facilities located in remote, often secret locations around the world. The vast learning part of the lives of these words will take place almost entirely in the billions of pages of printed information. Read because you will read these words as early as they necessary of the scene.

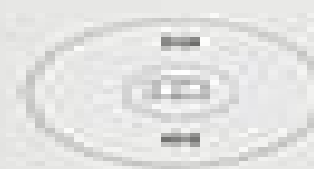

And yet it is now, the present, the early among my readers, I hope to write.

The words in this book are written for people, not computers.

I want to say, this book is for everybody before you can show yourself.
