scientific and engineering manpower this growing global demand is not only for numbers but also for appropriately skilled industry oriented professionals as companies are further scaling their operations and offering high value added services which involve higher levels of technology and more specialized higher end services Hence firms which want to maintain their competitive advantage have to carefully recruit and select the most suitable out of the large pool of available manpower Moreover according to a recent study by McKinsey Co although the potential supply of talent in low wage countries such as India is large and growing rapidly only a fraction of the job candidates could successfully work at a foreign company on account of their limited suitability i e though there are many candidates with the technical skills to fill a position they may not have the cultural skills to fit in with the organisation The same issue is also faced by large globally competitive domestic Indian firms who are competing for the same pool of talent and skills as their foreign counterparts to remain competitive and survive in global and domestic markets

Assessment James F. Baumann, 1988. Prediction of Job Performance Robert Vineberg, 1982. Literature pertaining to prediction of enlisted military job performance 1952-1980 was reviewed. The review excluded studies in which training performance or reenlistment is the criterion. Aptitude was the most frequently used predictor and supervisor ratings the most frequent criterion. Relationships among classes of criteria and between predictors and criteria were examined. Major classes of criteria were job proficiency, job performance and suitability to military service. The following conclusions are supported by the review: 1. For the great majority of jobs, job knowledge tests appear to provide the most practical method of objective measurement. 2. Because job sample tests are very expensive to construct and administer, their use is not practical unless the job is extremely costly or critical. 3. Use of supervisors ratings as the only measure of job performance should be restricted to jobs for which motivation social skill and response to situational requirements are the only attributes worth measuring Two promising approaches to improved prediction are the selective use of miniaturized training and assessment centers and the use of self paced training performance as a predictor The review includes abstracts of the studies that were reviewed
