History of Australian Bushranging Charles White,2014-05-15 History of Australian Bushranging Illustrated by Charles White Classic account of Australian bushranging recounts in vivid detail the deeds of the early bush bandits Attracted by the fast free life these native born Australians plundered the gold escorts and crowded coaches fighting it out with the police heroes in the eyes of the public they robbed The early history of bushranging in Australia will never be written for the facts have never been recorded Limited though the colony was in extent its literature even its journalism was still more limited Moreover the first men who took the bush were neither important nor interesting enough to obtain more than a passing mention in those Governors despatches which are our chief authorities for early colonial history The name being applied to men who some from choice and some from necessity ranged the bush as freebooters sticking up settlers and travellers and demanding in orthodox style your money or your life A Track to Unknown Water Stella Lees,1987 Centers on the particular contribution minority groups make to children s literature

The Gold Crusades Douglas Fetherling, George Fetherling, 1997-01-01 Among the hordes of starry eyed argonauts who flocked to the California gold rush of 1849 was an Australian named Edward Hargraves He left America empty handed only to find gold in his own backyard The result was the great Australian rush of the 1850s which also attracted participants from around the world A South African named P J Marais was one of them Marais too returned home in defeat only to set in motion the diamond and gold rushes that transformed southern Africa And so it went Most previous historians of the gold rushes have tended to view them as acts of spontaneous nationalism Each country likes to see its own gold rush as the one that either shaped those that followed or epitomized all the rest In The Gold Crusades A Social History of Gold Rushes 1849 1929 Douglas Fetherling takes a different approach Fetherling argues that the gold rushes in the United States Canada Australia New Zealand and South Africa shared the same causes and results the same characters and characteristics He posits that they were in fact a single discontinuous event an expression of the British imperial experience and nineteenth century liberalism He does so with dash and style and with a sharp eye for the telling anecdote the out of the way document and the bold connection between seemingly unrelated disciplines Originally published by Macmillan of Canada 1988
