Pathways to Development Samuel Hickey, Kunal Sen, 2024 This is an open access title available under the terms of a CC BY BC ND 4.0 International License It is free to read at Oxford Scholarship Online and offered as a free PDF download from OUP and selected open access locations The puzzle of why some countries are wealthier and more developed than others continues to confound students and practitioners of development alike Whereas earlier grand explanations focused on issues of geography or institutions the second decade of the 21st century finally saw politics arrive centre stage within international development This catalyzed a search to answer the key question under what conditions do governments become committed to and capable of delivering development How can these processes be conceptualized and researched And what if anything can be done to get the politics right for development Pathways to Development draws on a major comparative research effort to present new answers to the question of how politics shapes development It develops and applies a power domains framework across multiple countries in the global South to uncover the political drivers of development across a wide range of policy areas including economic growth gender equity health and education Hickey and Sen find that a country's pathway to development is shaped less by institutional type than by the nature of the politics and power relations that underpinned

these institutions and which shape how they actually function in practice within different policy domains Comparative analysis reveals two alternative pathways to developmental outcomes each of which is specific to particular configurations of power The first involves a dominant ruling coalition with a strong developmental vision that faces an existential threat from social forces the second involves competitive settlements within which the short term vision of ruling elites and the politicization of the public bureaucracy are offset by the presence of strong and coherent coalitions within particular policy domains Hickey and Sen use these insights to generate innovative practical suggestions for policy actors seeking to promote inclusive development that are aligned to critical differences in political context

Fiscal Decentralization and Local Finance in Developing Countries Roy Bahl, Richard M. Bird, 2018-03-30 This book draws on experiences in developing countries to bridge the gap between the conventional textbook treatment of fiscal decentralization and the actual practice of subnational government finance The extensive literature about the theory and practice is surveyed and longstanding problems and new questions are addressed It focuses on the key choices that must be made in decentralizing on how economic and political factors shape the choices that countries make and on how by paying more attention to the need for a more comprehensive approach and the critical connections between different components of decentralization reform everyone involved might get more for their money

United States of America Congressional Record, Proceedings and Debates of the 113th Congress Second Session Volume 160 - Part 1, International Trade, Economic Development, and the Vietnamese Economy Cuong Le Van, Van Pham Hoang, Makoto Tawada, 2022-05-03 This volume spotlights some of the most important economic issues confronting today's emerging developing countries The topics studied in the book include the importance of productivity to economic growth international trade and its relationship to productivity immigration and brain drain pollution havens climate change and the carbon tax the effectiveness of foreign aid the efficiency of education and governance Written by some of the most respected scholars in their respective fields the individual chapters apply both economic theory and the most current empirical tools in rigorous but accessible exposition Researchers can find value in the modeling and empirical techniques that can be applied to other countries and datasets Policy makers can benefit from the intellectual foundation on which decisions on important issues can be based and students of international trade economic development and environmental economics can gain knowledge of different country settings that give context to their fields of study
