The Missing Keystone of Income Tax Treaties Joanna Wheeler,2012 Le site d IBFD indique This thesis reveals a fundamental flaw in the OECD Model namely that it pays no attention to the person who is liable to tax in respect of the income for which treaty benefits are claimed This missing keystone causes two major problems of interpretation One problem arises if the contracting states attribute the income to different persons the myriad ways in which such a conflict can occur is illustrated by an extensive comparison of the domestic law of the Netherlands and the United Kingdom in this respect This missing keystone also causes a disconnection between the two principal conditions for treaty entitlement The treaty residence of the claimant is based on a general liability to tax in a contracting state whereas the distributive articles focus on the ownership of the income Interpretation problems arise if domestic law imposes a tax liability on a person who is not the owner of the income for example under anti avoidance legislation or a corporate group regime In order to eliminate this fundamental flaw the thesis proposes a new approach in which the criterion for treaty entitlement is liability to tax on the income backed up by substantial connections between the income and the treaty claimant and between the treaty claimant and the residence state The new approach is tested in various situations many of them decided cases and proves to give appropriate policy results while respecting the tax sovereignty of states The thesis includes a proposal for a re draft of the OECD Model on this basis

Reynolds, 2017-12-15 Chinese students in the UK have been increasing in number for many years yet competition from other Western educators and increasing investment in China s own education system has led to concern that UK institutions may soon see a decline in their market share Dr Reynolds addresses this issue in Chinese Students in UK Further Education by attempting to understand students experiences from their perspective Beginning with an exploration of why these students choose to come and study in the UK and why they are coming at younger ages the book goes on to discuss topics such as risk technology and diversity in order to understand which factors have the greatest influence on where they choose to study and whether they choose to remain at an institution Drawing on data from two different education institutions providers of GCSE A level programmes for students aged 16 18 years Dr Reynolds attempts to understand what these students experience during their studies how they manage new social relationships and whether upon course completion they achieved the results they desired at the outset Moreover the book aims to ascertain whether the students feel in hindsight that the decision to risk investing in UK further education was right and what they might communicate about UK study to contacts in China and elsewhere The book examines what further education institutions do well and where they might improve to help develop Chinese students educational experiences As such it will be essential reading for academics researchers and postgraduates in the fields of further education sociology of education international and intercultural education and mobility studies

Disability & the Politics of Education Susan Lynn Gabel,Scot Danforth,2008 Disability and the Politics of Education An International Reader is a rich resource that deals comprehensively with the many aspects of the complex topic of disability studies in education For nearly two decades global attention has been given to education as a human right through global initiatives such as Education for All EFA and the Salamanca Statement Yet according to UNESCO reaching the goals of EFA remains one of the most daunting challenges facing the global community Today millions of the world's disabled children cannot obtain a basic childhood education particularly in countries with limited resources Even in the wealthiest countries many disabled children and youth are educationally segregated from the nondisabled particularly if they are labeled with significant cognitive impairment International agencies such as the United Nations and the World Bank have generated funds for educational development but unfortunately these funds are administered with the assumption that west is best thereby urging developing countries to mimic educational policies in the United States and the United Kingdom in order to prove their aid worthiness This McDonaldization of education reproduces the labeling resource allocation and social dynamics long criticized in disability studies The authors in this volume explore these subjects and other complexities of disability and the politics of education In doing so they demonstrate the importance and usefulness of international perspectives and comparative approaches
