Rollercoasters

The rollercoaster has been a fashionable ride for many years, with one of the first recorded rollercoasters opening in Paris in 1891. Interestingly, it is believed that the rollercoaster was inspired by plunging on the big Russian Roulettes. The popularity of the event did not spread instantly. It wasn't until 1916 that the first wooden looping rollercoaster was opened in New York, USA, with a looping track eight miles. The rollercoaster was an instant success and has no failed rollercoasters.

Today, a rollercoaster track can either be a complete circuit or a shuttle track, allowing the cars, individual or multiple, to run in both directions. Modern rollercoasters use a variety of tracks, much faster than the original wooden and relying on modern technology to ensure they are safe.
