Abstract: This study's overarching goal is to assess the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on the mental health of the general population. The study's primary objective is to investigate the prevalence of mental health issues, such as anxiety, depression, and stress, during the pandemic. The study's secondary objective is to explore the factors that contribute to mental health issues, such as social isolation, economic hardship, and uncertainty about the future. The study's findings will be used to inform the development of mental health interventions and policies. The study's results are expected to show a significant increase in the prevalence of mental health issues during the pandemic, with higher rates of anxiety and depression. The study's findings will also identify the factors that are most strongly associated with mental health issues, such as social isolation and economic hardship. The study's results will be used to inform the development of mental health interventions and policies that target these factors.

It could also be the case that the two different subgroups of the sample are not comparable. For example, the two groups may differ in important ways that are not captured by the variables in the model. For example, the two groups may differ in their access to health care, or in their health status. If these differences are not captured by the variables in the model, they could bias the results.
