Manchester University Essay Prompt: Please provide a 250-500 word essay addressing a topic of your choosing or the following question. "If you could design a course at Manchester that would focus on your interest of study, what would it be called, what would it cover, and why?"

One of the movies I hold close to my heart is Fantasia 2000. It's a movie consisting of a series of animated stories that go with the music, featuring Mickey Mouse as a sorcerer's apprentice, the toys that come to life and dance, and so many more lively stories with incredible music. No matter how many times I have watched it, I would never hesitate to watch Fantasia over and over again. The way that the creators made these short films was by making animations solely based on the music they heard. I believe Fantasia is such a powerful creation because once you have watched it with the music, one can't help but imagine those exact animations when listening to the music on its own. I think this type of art involves an incredible level of creativity. It brings the color and movements out of different notes. It puts visuals to sounds. It gives the audience an authentic experience of what the music means.

If I could design a course at Manchester University, I would create a class called "The Art of Music." In this class, students would learn how to take a musical piece and display it in a physical art form. They would listen to a song and look at different aspects of it. They would unpack different sections of the song, distinct melodies, lyrics [if any], and pretty much anything that they can pick up from the music. Each note or word could mean something different to every individual student. When listening to the same part of a song, one student might envision a field of purple and yellow flowers, yet another student might envision powdery snow that falls atop mountains. Could a single musical composition be viewed as one story or a collection of fantasies? After learning how to see music in different ways, students will learn to put it into a physical form. They would be able to present their interpretations in 4 different ways; an art piece on canvas or paper, a dance or body representation, a physical structure (clay, stone, wood, etc.), or a video. Then there would be a day where all the students would present their artistic representation and explain it. They would go in-depth about why they added specific shapes, colors, movements, etc. and how it relates to the song that they heard.
