Step 1: Check for an Internet connection. If your Mac will use this connection to install certain setup software, it may require a wireless password. Plug in the essential devices: If you're using an external keyboard and trackball or mouse, turn them on or plug them into your Mac. If using an external display, plug it in and turn it on as well, but don't connect the other peripherals yet. And, of course, plug your Mac into the power source before hitting a tip: To lock the screen, tap on the trackball surface. Turn on your Mac. The Mac will boot up when you turn on the computer. The first time you turn on the Mac, it will ask you to set up the setup assistant. A series of windows will guide you through the setup process. If you've used a Mac before, you can skip some steps. If you're using a Mac for the first time, you'll need to create a new user account. You'll also need to set up your Mac's security features, such as FileVault and Keychain. You can also choose to transfer information from your old Mac to the new one using Migration Assistant. You'll be guided through the process of setting up your Mac's security features, such as FileVault and Keychain. You can also choose to transfer information from your old Mac to the new one using Migration Assistant. You'll be guided through the process of setting up your Mac's security features, such as FileVault and Keychain. You can also choose to transfer information from your old Mac to the new one using Migration Assistant.

Step 2: Connect to the Internet. After your software is installed, you'll need to connect to the Internet. You can do this by plugging in a network cable or by using Wi-Fi. If you're using Wi-Fi, you'll need to select the network you want to connect to. If you're using a network cable, you'll need to make sure the cable is plugged in correctly. Once you're connected to the Internet, you can proceed with the setup process.

Step 3: Set up your Mac. The setup assistant will guide you through the process of setting up your Mac. This includes creating a new user account, setting up your Mac's security features, and transferring information from your old Mac to the new one. Once you've completed the setup process, your Mac will be ready to use.
