However, if your business interests have consistently been successful for years – but for some reason still depend more on money than on customer relationships – it may be time to consider pivoting. Before pivoting, you should conduct a thorough financial analysis to ensure that your business is profitable. Then, you can begin to pivot by identifying areas of your business that are most profitable and focusing on those areas. You can also consider pivoting to a new market or product line. For example, if you are a software company, you could pivot to a new market such as healthcare or education. Or, you could pivot to a new product line such as mobile apps or cloud services. The key is to identify areas of your business that are most profitable and focus on those areas. This will help you to grow your business and increase your revenue.
