- These results are interpreted that negative emotional IELs (e.g., IELs that report their brands contain a warning, are associated with warning photos etc.) are not beneficial.
- The results also suggest that negative emotions that are associated with the general attitude towards the brand are not beneficial.
- Contrary to the prediction that brand presence signals brands and that this will cause positive emotions, the results become negative.
- Thus, all emotional brands that are associated with negative emotions.
- There are no immediate any direct unconnected brands with emotional target for readers.
- The use of optical advertisements with their positive effects.

Abstract: In this paper, we study the asymptotic behavior of the spectral density of the sample autocorrelation function of a stationary process. We show that the spectral density of the sample autocorrelation function converges to the spectral density of the process in the L^2 -norm. This result is a generalization of the result of [1].
