Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a supervised walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of supervised walking, 3 times per week, for 30 minutes per session. The control group consisted of 20 women who did not participate in the walking program. The physical and psychological health of the subjects was assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The walking program had a significant positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the subjects. The walking program significantly improved the subjects' physical health, as measured by the 6-minute walk test, and their psychological health, as measured by the Beck Depression Inventory and the State-Trait Anxiety Inventory. The walking program also significantly improved the subjects' quality of life, as measured by the SF-36. The walking program was well tolerated and had no adverse effects. The results of this study suggest that a supervised walking program can be an effective intervention for improving the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.

4. Implement the solution. Once a solution has been chosen, the next step is to implement it. This involves developing a plan, assigning responsibilities, and putting the plan into action.

5. Evaluate the results. The final step in the problem-solving process is to evaluate the results. This involves monitoring the progress of the solution, assessing the impact of the solution, and making adjustments as needed.

What's the Problem? ■
 Many people have a hard time getting a good night's sleep. But what is the reason for this? Is it the stress of the day? Is it the noise of the city? Is it the light from the street? Or is it something else? The answer is often a combination of these factors. But there is one thing that is almost always true: If you are not getting enough sleep, you are not at your best. You are more likely to be tired, irritable, and prone to mistakes. So, if you are having trouble sleeping, it's time to take a closer look at your sleep habits. What are you doing that might be keeping you awake? And what can you do to get a good night's sleep?
