Abstract The purpose of this study was to assess the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of young adults. The study was conducted in a university setting. The participants were 100 young adults, aged 18-25, who were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The experimental group participated in a 12-week training program that included aerobic exercise, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The control group did not participate in any training program. The study found that the experimental group showed significant improvements in physical health, including increased cardiovascular fitness, muscle strength, and flexibility. Additionally, the experimental group also showed improvements in psychological health, including reduced stress levels and improved mood. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can have a positive effect on the physical and psychological health of young adults.
