THE CHALLENGE At Brookline, the town's only hospital, the staff of 1,000 employees had to find a way to keep the hospital open during the COVID-19 pandemic. The hospital was the only one in the area that could handle the surge in patients. The staff had to work long hours and deal with a high level of stress. They had to find a way to keep the hospital open and provide the best care possible for their patients.

1. The first step in the process of identifying a problem is to define the problem. This involves identifying the symptoms and the underlying causes of the problem. Once the problem has been defined, the next step is to gather information about the problem. This can be done through a variety of methods, including interviews, surveys, and observation. Once the information has been gathered, the next step is to analyze the information. This involves identifying the key factors that are contributing to the problem and determining the best way to address the problem. Finally, the last step in the process is to implement a solution. This involves putting the solution into action and monitoring the results to ensure that the problem has been resolved.
