they were very happy but a lady at the court Bertalda had loved the knight herself before ever he met Undine and still loved him so she did her best to persuade him that the fair Undine was a witch Undine thought that a person who was so cruel must be unhappy and thought it was because she was an orphan so she found out through the water fairies that Bertalda was the lost daughter of the fisher folk her foster parents and sent for them But Bertalda was furious at being discovered to be a peasant and hated Undine still more and did more to set Huldbrand against his bride Now Undine knew if her husband was cruel to her or loved another she would have to kill him and rejoin the water people so she did her best by loving ways to inspire him with faith but he grew more and more suspicious especially when Undine had the great well of the castle covered with a huge stone for she feared lest Huldbrand's treatment would cause the Rhine fairies who could only enter the castle by that spring to do him injury
