

Emergence Of Modern China: III

The Hundred Days' Reform and the Aftermath

In the 103 days from June 11 to September 21, 1898, the Qing emperor, Guangxu (光緒 1875-1908), ordered a series of reforms aimed at making sweeping social and institutional changes. This effort reflected the thinking of a group of progressive scholar-reformers who had impressed the court with the urgency of making innovations for the nation's survival. Influenced by the Japanese success with modernization, the reformers declared that China needed more than "self-strengthening" and that innovation must be accompanied by institutional and ideological change.

The imperial edicts for reform covered a broad range of subjects, including stamping out corruption and remaking, among other things, the academic and civil-service examination systems, legal system, governmental structure, defense establishment, and postal services. The edicts attempted to modernize agriculture, medicine, and mining and to promote practical studies instead of Neo-Confucian orthodoxy. The court also planned to send students abroad for firsthand observation and technical studies. All these changes were to be brought about under a de facto constitutional monarchy.

Opposition to the reform was intense among the conservative ruling elite, especially the Manchus, who, in condemning the announced reform as too radical, proposed instead a more moderate and gradualist course of change. Supported by ultraconservatives and with the tacit support of the political opportunist Yuan Shikai (袁世凱 1859-1916), Empress Dowager Ci Xi (慈禧) engineered a coup d'état on September 21, 1898, forcing the young reform-minded Guangxu into seclusion. Ci Xi took over the government as regent. The Hundred Days' Reform (百日維新) ended with the rescindment of the new edicts and the execution of six of the reform's chief advocates. The two principal leaders, Kang Youwei (康有為 1858-1927) and Liang Qichao (梁啟超 1873-1929), fled abroad to found the Baohuang Hui (保皇會 or Protect the Emperor Society) and to work, unsuccessfully, for a constitutional monarchy in China.

The conservatives then gave clandestine backing to the antforeign and anti-Christian movement of secret societies known as Yihetuan (義和團 or Society of Righteousness and Harmony). The movement has been better known in the West as the Boxers (from an earlier name--Yihequan, 義和拳 or Righteousness and Harmony Boxers). In 1900 Boxer bands spread over the north China countryside, burning missionary facilities and killing Chinese Christians. Finally, in June 1900, the Boxers besieged the foreign concessions in Beijing and Tianjin, an action that provoked an allied relief expedition by the offended nations. The Qing declared war against the invaders, who easily crushed their opposition and occupied north China. Under the Protocol of 1901, the court was made to consent to the execution of ten high officials and the punishment of hundreds of others, expansion of the Legation Quarter, payment of war reparations, stationing of foreign troops in China, and razing of some Chinese fortifications.

In the decade that followed, the court belatedly put into effect some reform measures. These included the abolition of the moribund Confucian-based examination, educational and military modernization patterned after the model of Japan, and an experiment, if half-hearted, in constitutional and parliamentary government. The suddenness and ambitiousness of the reform effort actually hindered its success. One effect, to be felt for decades to come, was the establishment of new armies, which, in turn, gave rise to warlordism.

The Republican Revolution of 1911

Failure of reform from the top and the fiasco of the Boxer Uprising convinced many Chinese that the only real solution lay in outright revolution, in

The Invention of China Bill Hayton, 2020-10-13 A provocative account showing that China and its 5 000 years of unified history is a national myth created only a century ago with a political agenda that persists to this day China's current leadership lays claim to a 5 000 year old civilization but China as a unified country and people Bill Hayton argues was created far more recently by a small group of intellectuals In this compelling account Hayton shows how China's present day geopolitical problems the fates of Hong Kong Taiwan Tibet Xinjiang and the South China Sea were born in the struggle to create a modern nation state In the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries reformers and revolutionaries adopted foreign ideas to invent a new vision of China By asserting a particular politicized version of the past the government bolstered its claim to a vast territory stretching from the Pacific to Central Asia Ranging across history nationhood language and territory Hayton shows how the Republic's reworking of its past not only helped it to justify its right to rule a century ago but continues to motivate and direct policy today

Becoming China Jeanne-Marie Gescher, 2017-11-09 An account of China's past and present how a small group of people at the edges of the Yellow River evolved to become the state of China today Despite decades of a relatively open door relationship with the rest of the world China is still a mystery to many outside it How does China work what does it want why does it want it and what does its rise to global power mean for the rest of the world As the twenty first century looks set to be the stage for a battle about competing geopolitical ideals these are urgent questions for everyone with an interest in what the future might bring A world of its own China is both a microcosm and an amplification of questions and events in the wider world China s story offers us an opportunity to hold a mirror to ourselves to our own assumptions to our values and to our ideas about the most important question of all what it means to be human in the world of the state Epic in scope this is the story of how China became the state it is today and how its worldview is based on what has gone before Weaving together inspirations ideas wars and dreams Jeanne Marie Gescher reveals the heart of what it means to be Chinese and how the past impacts the present

Political Economy Of Deng's Nanxun, The: Breakthrough In China's Reform And Development John Wong, 2014-03-12 This volume is about the political economy of Deng Xiaoping s Nanxun tour of South China which was the most critical phase in China s reform and development since 1978 The first round of Deng s reform resulted in high growth through the 1980s However it created a messy half reformed economy with many problems including the Tiananmen incident The immediate aftermath of the Tiananmen was collapse of economic growth and reform deadlock To break out from this low level reform growth trap Deng decided to launch the Nanxun not just to reignite the reform but also to complete China s march towards a market economy Looking back the Nanxun led to the most crucial reform breakthrough which in turn sparked off a dynamic reform growth nexus for China s eventual economic take off The chapters in this volume were originally policy reports on China meant for the Singapore government These reports were written based on the information available at that time and reflected the prevailing political mood Each chapter is accompanied by a detailed introduction that is aimed at providing a broad background for readers to better understand the Nanxun period The introduction also serves as a post evaluation of the events based on new information and shows how those events have evolved over the years In combination these chapters should piece together a reasonably realistic picture of the basic politics and economics of the crucial Nanxun period

Rural-Urban Migration and Agro-Technological Change in Post-Reform China Lena Kaufmann, 2025-10-01 How do rural Chinese households deal with the conflicting pressures of migrating into cities to work as well as staying at home to preserve their fields This is particularly challenging for rice farmers because paddy fields have to be cultivated continuously to retain their soil quality and value Drawing on ethnographic fieldwork and written sources Rural Urban Migration and Agro Technological Change in Post Reform China describes farming households strategic solutions to this predicament It shows how in light of rural urban migration and agro technological change they manage to sustain both migration and farming It innovatively conceives rural households as part of a larger farming community of practice that spans both staying and migrating household members and their material world Focusing on one exemplary resource paddy fields it argues that socio technical resources are key factors in understanding migration flows and migrant home relations Overall this book provides rare insights into the rural side of migration and farmers knowledge and agency
