The Supply of Petroleum Reserves in South-East Asia Corazón Morales Siddayao, 2013-03-13 which may be termed political risks may be important determinants of investment After taking such risks into consideration in the exploration and development stage a firm computing the present value of its probable income stream must consider several other factors In addition to the current rate of production it must consider these 1 engineering limits to the rate of extraction in any given period 2 physical limits to the total amount of the resource that can be produced within a given location and 3 limits to the availability of new petroleum sources at the same costs as at the present location It might be useful at this point to note that the firm as an exploration agent in South East Asia operates largely as a contractor to the host government who has ownership and final control over the petroleum resources The group of suppliers of petroleum reserves in the region is characterized by the presence of the major companies directly or through subsidiaries as well as by many smaller and even independent companies Three major companies currently dominate exploration and producing operations in two countries Exxon and Shell in Malaysia Shell in Brunei In Indonesia Caltex and Stanvac dominate production Outside Malaysia and Brunei the bulk of new exploration is conducted by relatively smaller companies side by side with the major companies like Exxon Gulf Mobil Shell and Texaco
