The Dogs And The Wolves:

The Dogs and the Wolves Irène Némirovsky, 2009 This wonderful panoramic novel goes right back to Irène Némirovsky's roots sweeping the reader from the Jewish quarter of a Ukrainian city in the early years of the twentieth century to Paris in the twenties and thirties and back again to eastern Europe in a snowy winter on the eve of war At its heart is a tragic love between Ada from the poor Jewish quarter and Harry son of a rich financier The dogs are the comfortable assimilated rich Jews up on the hill while the wolves their distant cousins struggle below in the ghetto Ada grows up motherless looked after first by her father then by an indomitable social climbing aunt and eventually moves to Paris with her aunt's family all of them looking for a brighter future Ada makes a living in Paris as an artist painting scenes from the world she has left behind Her cousin Ben intense and ferociously intelligent has loved her for years they share memories together they survived the terrible pogroms of their childhood and he presses her to marry him But Harry Sinner is also in Paris moving in exclusive circles and infatuated with the daughter of a wealthy gentile banker One day he buys two paintings which remind him of his pasta and the course of Ada's life changes once more But as recession and revolutions shake previously rich regimes even a solid international bank can find itself over extended and vulnerable to greed Ben now working for the Sinner family bank in Paris is well placed to take the kind of risks he could only dream of in the past And as summer draws to a close Ada's world is disintegrating and she is faced with a fateful decision The Dogs and the Wolves painted on a broad vibrant canvas with Némirovsky's acute eye for small cruelties and everyday sacrifice is an achingly poignant novel about blood and belonging dreams and desire
