

Why did the Roman Republic fall?

The Roman Republic fell due to a combination of factors. These factors were the incompetency of the Senate, the outdated structure of governance, political violence in Rome & the loss of control of the Army.

The Roman Republic fell due to the incompetency of the Senate.

After Sulla's social war & the proscriptions, the scope of Senators who were left were a "parody of evolution" (Badian) as only the dumbest and weakest had survived to rule Rome.

As a result, the incompetent Senate gave out extraordinary commands frequently such as the Pro-Consular Imperium to Pompey under the Lex Manilia. This gave individuals significant military power that could be inverted to gain political power against the Senate, as seen in 70 BCE when Pompey marched on Rome with 30,000 men & intimidated the Senate for the 70 BCE consulship.

Furthermore, the Senate was seen as incompetent due to its handling of the courts.

The people of Rome saw the extortion courts as "inherently corrupt" (Judge) as known extortionists such as Dolabella in 77 BCE & Hybrida in 76 BCE were found not guilty despite overwhelming evidence.

The Senate's handling of the courts "severely diminished the faith" (Grant) of the people in the Senate as it was common to see bribery of 300,000 sesterces in the extortion courts to convict a man.

The incompetency of the Senate's calibre & its granting of extraordinary command as well as its corrupt handling of the courts diminished people's faith in the Senate's leadership, leading to the fall of the Roman Republic.

The outdated structure of the Roman Government led directly to the fall of the Roman Republic.

The Cursus Honorum & the Lex Annalis established a series of rigid checks and balances to prevent one man seizing too much power in Rome.

However, this meant that the enforced tenures of 1 year in positions of power led to ineffective governance & a lack of progressive change. Additionally, the structure of Roman Gov. "served only a small community not a growing world power" (Dudley), making Government inefficient in managing a growing Empire & leading to problems such as extortion (as seen by Governor Dolabella's extortion of Macedon in 77 BCE).

This was contrasted by the success of long-term one man rule such as the conquering of Gaul by Caesar over 10 years or the capture of the East by Pompey in 5 years.

As a result, the people looked toward "competent dictatorial rulership" (Grant) over Rome rather than the inefficient 1 year rule of the Senate.

The fall of the Roman Republic was a result of an outdated, inefficient Roman Government of the Senate compared to the efficiency of one man rule.

The use of political violence led directly to the fall of the Roman Republic.

Activities such as political thuggery & violence "became the status quo" (Gruen) of Roman politics as a method of securing power. This was highlighted by the activities of the First Triumvirate as they used thugs to attack Caesar's rival Bibulus by pouring faeces on him & stabbing him, securing Caesar an almost sole consulship in 59 BCE. The Triumvirate also used veterans to "intimidate & coerce" (Gruen) voters to secure the election of Pompey & Crassus in 57 BCE.
