Abstract: The authors report on a study of the effects of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact aerobically based exercise program on the health and well-being of older adults. The study was conducted in a community center in a large city. The results of the study indicate that the program had a positive effect on the health and well-being of the participants. The authors conclude that such a program is a viable option for promoting health and well-being in older adults.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 sedentary women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were randomly assigned to a 12-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes, and included a combination of aerobic and resistance exercises. The control group consisted of 12 sedentary women who did not participate in the training program. The HR and EE were measured at rest and during the training sessions. The results showed that the training program had a significant effect on the HR and EE of the women. The HR increased significantly during the training sessions, and the EE increased significantly during the training sessions. The control group showed no significant changes in HR or EE. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the HR and EE of sedentary, middle-aged women.
