the following information is provided for the first two months of the program, please refer to the program manual for information on the remaining 10 months. The program manual is available at www.heart.org. For more information on the program, please contact your local health department or the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute at 1-800-541-8721.

How long does the program last?
The program lasts for 12 months.

What are the goals of the program?
The program has two main goals: to reduce the risk of heart disease and to improve the quality of life for participants. The program achieves these goals by providing participants with a comprehensive health assessment, a personalized health plan, and ongoing support and education.

How is the program delivered?
The program is delivered through a combination of in-person and remote services. Participants receive a comprehensive health assessment and a personalized health plan from a health coach. They also receive ongoing support and education through a variety of resources, including group classes, individual coaching, and online tools.

What are the benefits of the program?
The program offers a number of benefits to participants, including:
• Improved health and well-being
• Reduced risk of heart disease
• Improved quality of life
• Increased knowledge and understanding of heart health
• Access to a variety of resources and support

How much does the program cost?
The program is free of charge for participants. However, there may be some costs associated with the program, such as the cost of the health assessment and the cost of the health plan. These costs are typically covered by the local health department.

How do I enroll in the program?
To enroll in the program, please contact your local health department or the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute at 1-800-541-8721. You will need to provide some basic information, such as your name, address, and phone number. Once you are enrolled, you will receive a health assessment and a personalized health plan.

What are the requirements for the program?
There are no specific requirements for the program. However, participants should be at least 18 years old and should not have any serious medical conditions. Participants should also be able to communicate in English.

How do I know if the program is right for me?
The program is designed for people who are at risk of heart disease or who have heart disease. If you are unsure if the program is right for you, please contact your local health department or the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute at 1-800-541-8721. They will be able to help you decide if the program is right for you.

How do I contact the program?
You can contact the program through a variety of ways, including:
• Calling 1-800-541-8721
• Visiting www.heart.org
• Contacting your local health department

What are the program's limitations?
The program is not a substitute for medical care. It is designed to provide support and education to people who are at risk of heart disease or who have heart disease. It is not intended to diagnose or treat any medical conditions. If you have any medical conditions, please consult your doctor.

How do I know if the program is effective?
The program has been shown to be effective in a number of studies. These studies have shown that participants in the program have a lower risk of heart disease and a better quality of life than people who do not participate in the program. The program has also been shown to be cost-effective.

How do I know if the program is safe?
The program is safe for participants. It has been shown to be safe in a number of studies. These studies have shown that participants in the program do not experience any serious side effects. The program is also safe for people who are pregnant or breastfeeding.

How do I know if the program is accessible?
The program is accessible to people of all ages, races, and ethnicities. It is also accessible to people with disabilities. The program is designed to be as accessible as possible to all people.
