- By 1934 challenges to the New Deal came from both sides of the political spectrum. In California Socialist Upton Sinclair ran for Governor promising to turn idle land and factories into self-governing cooperatives. Sinclair's campaign ended in defeat, but one year later President Roosevelt's signing of the Social Security Act signalled America's emergence as a modern welfare state.
- Social security- unemployment compensation, old age pensions, and for the increased services for the protection of children and the prevention of ill health
- Forced to back down from national health insurance
- Food stamps were introduced and being tried out when the war on poverty made them permanent

- President Lyndon Johnson declared "unconditional war" on poverty:
 - Depending on your ideological priors, the ensuing effort was either "a catastrophe"
 - or "lived up to our best hopes as a people who value the dignity and potential of every human being"
- 1964
- War on poverty- "Our aim is not only to relieve the symptoms of poverty, but to cure it and, above all, to prevent it."

4 pieces of legislation

- The Social Security Amendments of 1965, which created Medicare and Medicaid and also expanded Social Security benefits for retirees, widows, the disabled and college-aged students, financed by an increase in the payroll tax cap and rates.
- The Food Stamp Act of 1964, which made the food stamps program, then only a pilot, permanent.
- The Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, which established the Job Corps, the VISTA program, the federal work-study program and a number of other initiatives. It also established the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO), the arm of the White House responsible for implementing the war on poverty and which created the Head Start program in the process.
- The Elementary and Secondary Education Act, signed into law in 1965, which established the Title I program subsidizing school districts with a large share of impoverished students, among other provisions. ESEA has since been reauthorized, most recently in the No Child Left Behind Act.
