Leading Lutheran Higher Education in a Secular Age Brian Beckstrom, 2020-07-15. Lutheran colleges and universities occupy a distinctive space in American higher education. In an age where the dividing line between sacred and secular has become blurred, Brian Beckstrom argues that their rooted and open approach combined with adaptive theological leadership could be the best hope for faith-based higher education. To do so, he provides an overview of Lutheran higher education, its history and identity, and combines surveys of students, faculty, and staff at Lutheran institutions with leadership theory and theological reflection. Leaders at Lutheran colleges and universities will find it to be helpful in understanding their mission, identity, and vocation in a secular age and navigating the changing cultural environment that challenges the church and higher education alike.

Facilitating Change Through Intergroup Dialogue Kristie Ford, 2017-06-26. In order both to prepare for an increasingly diverse society and to help students navigate diverse learning environments, many institutions of higher education have developed programs that support student learning and competencies around inter and intra-group relations. Facilitating Change through Intergroup Dialogue: Social Justice Advocacy in Practice traces the impact of Intergroup Dialogue (IGD) courses on peer facilitators who delivered Skidmore College's IGD curricula over a five-year period. Through a series of in-depth qualitative interviews and auto-ethnographies, this book explores how former IGD facilitators are applying what they learned to their personal and professional lives three to five years post-college. By exploring facilitators' application of IGD skills, understanding of social justice, and the challenges inherent in this work, Facilitating Change through Intergroup Dialogue offers concrete strategies for supporting undergraduate students in their enduring efforts towards justice.

Transforming Leadership Pathways for Humanities Professionals in Higher Education Roze Hentschell, Catherine E. Thomas, 2023-04-15. Transforming Leadership Pathways for Humanities Professionals in Higher Education includes thirteen essays from a variety of contributors investigating how humanities professionals grapple with the opportunities and challenges of leadership positions. Written by insiders sharing their lived experience, this collection provides an authentic look at the multiple roles humanities specialists play as well as offers strategies for professional growth, sustenance, and satisfaction. The collection also considers the relationship between disciplinary areas of study, academic training, and the valuable skill sets and habits of mind that serve higher education leaders. While Transforming Leadership Pathways emphasizes that a leadership route in higher education can be a welcome and positive professional move for many humanities scholars, the volume also acknowledges the issues that arise when faculty take on administrative positions while otherwise marginalized on campus because of faculty status rank or personal identity This collection demystifies the path into higher education administration and argues that humanities scholars are uniquely qualified for such roles Empathetic deeply analytical attuned to historical context and trained in communication teachers and scholars who hail from humanities disciplines often find themselves well suited to the demands of complex academic leadership in today's colleges and universities

Transforming Higher Education Stephen J. Rosow, Thomas Kriger, 2012-07-10 The university is being transformed and can be transformed This doubleness informs this book Transforming in transforming higher education can be read as adjective suggesting that higher education is being transformed by the social and political situation in which it is enmeshed Transforming can also be read as a gerund implying the critical activity of changing the university as signaling a creative and political act of radical possibility The essays in this book address the transformation of higher education and the transformative possibilities of its current conditions Only by viewing the university as a historical construction can we assess the dangers and opportunities of the new conditions of higher education and chart a reasonable course for the future The essays in this book are critical of recent developments in universities and higher education Most of us come from public universities and all remain committed to a democratic higher education that we see threatened by recent developments There is a danger that the combination of economic crisis market ideology and global pressures will continue to structure the debate about higher education in ways that freeze out the transformative and politically critical possibilities of the university Part I of the book examines the historical transformation of the university as it has changed into its current form Part II examines both the transformation of the university into a neoliberal institution and makes the case for the more political and radical idea of transforming the university in opposition to how it has been transformed in recent years Part III offers a number of studies aimed at illuminating possibilities for transforming the university in a more progressive democratic direction

Leading Across the Arc of Time Mark L. Putnam, 2025-04-08 How short term college and university leaders overwhelmed by the tyranny of the urgent compromise the success and future of their institutions Amid mounting institutional pressures and a rapidly changing higher education landscape leadership churn at colleges and universities represents a major roadblock to institutional success In Leading across the Arc of Time college president Mark L Putnam presents a vital road map for navigating the complex dynamics of managing colleges and universities amid continuous change This insightful work reveals the paradoxes of higher education where innovation collides with tradition and where the pace of societal demand outstrips the capacity for institutional response Institutional stability requires a focus on long term trends rather than short term solutions and temporary interventions Putnam articulates a vision for adaptive leadership grounded in a profound understanding of historical patterns and organizational theory The book challenges administrators trustees and policymakers to embrace the slow often frustrating process of assimilation as the pathway to meaningful change The future of higher education depends not on rapid transformation but on thoughtful incremental adaptation Putnam seeks to disrupt the current pattern of churning in leadership planning and decision making that plagues many institutions and to break through the rigidities of conventional wisdom and conformity that confine leadership action For those committed to the future of academic institutions this book is an indispensable guide that equips leaders with the insights and creative solutions to guide their institutions with foresight and wisdom
