

priority sector to obtain Rwanda's development goals as stated in the nation's vision 2020 strategy.

This industry has accepted the concept of sustainable development and has adopted the concept of sustainable tourism. The sustainable tourism develops the idea of meeting current requirements of the tourists and of the tourism industry, while protecting the environment and opportunities for the future. The World Tourism Organization defines sustainable tourism as "tourism which leads to management of all resources in such a way that economic, social and aesthetic needs can be filled while maintaining cultural integrity, essential ecological processes, biological diversity and life support systems (WTO Report, 2002: 7). It has to meet all the economic, social, aesthetic requirements of the "actors" from tourism, while maintaining cultural and environmental integrity, the biological diversity and all systems that support life (Agenda 21 for Travel and Tourism Industry, 1992). In other words, all tourism activities in a country or region should be compatible with the maximum number of travelers and with the natural environment facilities, ensuring thus a sustainable economic and ecological functioning at all levels.

Tourism's issues are one of the most dynamic economic sectors, which recorded an upward trend with permanent changes. Since the publication "Limits to Growth" (Meadows et al., 1972) and the Brundtland Report (WCED, 1987) sustainability has become an essential issue within the discourse of policy makers and private stakeholders. In the last two decades there has been an increasing body of knowledge for providing theoretical and practical contributions to policy makers and tourism operators in order to tackle the unsustainability of tourism. Public and private stakeholders need tools for managing the negative impacts of tourism on destinations. In this perspective, various efforts have been promoted by diverse organizations such as governments, European organizations (EU) international tourism organizations (e.g., UNWTO, OECD) for enhancing sustainable tourism practices. These efforts have however led to a lack in sharing standardized indicators among destinations as well as in comparing non-homogenized data. Thus, tools for sustainable management of tourism destinations still remain a crucial issue for tourism stakeholders and scholars.

The travel and tourism industry is placed among the largest industries in the world. However, the degrading effects of tourism have become a big concern and need to be addressed quickly. With this in mind, the concept of sustainable tourism has emerged with the aim of reducing the negative effects of tourism activities, which has become almost universally accepted as a desirable and politically appropriate approach to tourism development (Sharpley, 2003). Sustainability covers all elements that constitute a complete tourism experience. According to the majority of scientists (Briguglio, Archer, Jafari, & Wall, 1996; Butler, 1991; Sharpley, 2000; Vellas & Becherel, 1999; WCED, 1987) "sustainable tourism development" concerns an economic, social and environmental tourism development that aims at the continuous improvement of tourists' experiences. The tourism industry has the potential to contribute to sustainable development, particularly by job creating, including employment for women and marginalised groups (Cukier, 2002; Go'rg, 2000). The purpose of sustainable tourism is to make a balance between protecting the environment, maintaining cultural integrity, establishing social justice and promoting economic benefits, meeting the needs of the host population in terms of improved living standards both in the short and long term (Liu et al., 2013) in both developed and emerging nations (Mitchell & Hall, 2005; Swarbrooke & Horner, 2004) while emphasising both intergenerational equity and intra-generational equity (Liu, 2013) and in a form that can maintain its viability in an area for an indefinite period of time' (Butler, 1993, 1999). In community tourism, sustainable development is applied to improve the residents' quality of life by optimising local economic benefits, protecting the natural and built environment and providing a high-quality experience for visitors (Bramwell & Lane, 1993; McIntyre, 1993; Park & Yoon, 2009; Park, Yoon, & Lee, 2008; Stabler, 1997).

2. Sustainable Tourism

2.1. Definitions

Sustainable tourism is defined as "... a positive approach intended to reduce tensions and frictions created by complex interactions between the tourism industry, tourists, the natural environment and local communities that host tourists" (Journal of Sustainable Tourism, 1993).

Beyond Green Horizon Paper (Tourism Concern, 1992) defines sustainable tourism as "... tourism and infrastructure related to both present and future; operating between the limits of capacity for regeneration of natural resources; recognizes the contribution of local people and communities; customs and lifestyles in the tourist experience; accepts that people should have economic profits from tourism being based on their desire to be hosts to tourists".
