1. Maslow explains that the first reason we communicate is for survival.
2. Like many languages, American English has various dialects – geographic or social differences in the way groups of people use the same language.
3. Before communicating, the sender must encode the idea that he or she wants to communicate or put it into some form or code that he or she hopes the other person can understand. True
4. Because words have human senders and receivers, they also have multiple intentions and interpretations. True
5. Messages are the actual pieces of information exchanged between individuals in an interaction and can only be verbal. False
6. The sender is the source of interpersonal communication—the person who originates the communication encounter.
7. The meaning you interpret from a message is never personal and is always the result of what a person communicates through their words. False
8. For communication to be effective, the message must have the same or similar meaning for both the sender and the receiver.
9. When you communicate with others, one way to minimize misunderstandings is to increase your awareness of the intentions of your messages and the possible interpretations of your words. True
10. Like other languages, English is not growing and evolving. It is complete and now must be mastered. False
11. All people who are shy have high communication apprehension in all areas of life. False
12. The term Informal language describes a wide range of common and nonstandard English, including jargon, colloquialisms, idioms, and slang.
13. Researchers believe that self-concept is a complex mix of how we see ourselves, what others have told us about ourselves, and what society says we should be.
14. According to Bevan, culture influences all except the following. The basic elements of communication
15. One reason language is so powerful is that it is the means by which you construct your reality. True
16. In interpersonal communication, when two people are talking face to face, the channel is the air (or auditory channel) around them that carries the message. True
17. Using racial slurs constitutes as racist language.
18. Intrapersonal communication refers to how we communicate to ourselves.
19. The fundamental purpose of human communication is to allow people to generate and share their thoughts, feelings, experiences, beliefs, opinions, or really anything they can think to express. True
20. Jargon is the specialized or technical language of a specific group or profession that may not be understood by outsiders. Jargon
