The Early Years

The first steps towards artificial intelligence began in the 1950s, when scientists first started building computers that could understand and execute simple commands. This early AI was limited in scope and was mainly used for simple tasks, such as playing games.

In the 1960s, AI research began to expand and explore more complex problems, such as natural language processing, robotics, and machine learning. These early efforts laid the groundwork for the development of more advanced AI technologies in the decades to come.
