Human Development and Global Institutions Richard Ponzio, Arunabha Ghosh, 2016-02-05 This book provides a timely and accessible introduction to the foundational ideas associated with the human development school of thought It examines its conceptual evolution during the post colonial era and discusses how various institutions of the UN system have tried to engage with this issue both in terms of intellectual and technical advance and operationally Showing that human development has had a profound impact on shaping the policy agenda and programming priorities of global institutions it argues that human development has helped to preserve the continued vitality of major multilateral development programs funds and agencies It also details how human development faces new risks and threats caused by political economic social and environmental forces which are highlighted in a series of engaging case studies on trade water energy the environment democracy human rights and peacebuilding The book also makes the case for why human development remains relevant in an increasingly globalized world while asking whether global institutions will be able to sustain political and moral support from their member states and powerful non state actors It argues that fresh new perspectives on human development are now urgently needed to fill critical gaps across borders and entire regions A positive forward looking agenda for the future of global governance would have to engage with new issues such as the Sustainable Development Goals energy transitions resource scarcity and expansion of democratic governance within and between nations Redefining the overall nature and specific characteristics of what constitutes human progress in an increasingly integrated and interdependent world this book serves as a primer for scholars and graduate students of international relations and development It is also relevant to scholars of economics political science history sociology and women s studies National Human Development Report. elements impact human capital and how they might improve it in order to increase economic growth and well being

Granmo, Pieter Fourie, 2021-02-22 This book maps the emergence of health in global development discourse and governance since 1990 It argues that health norms have emerged diffused and subsequently become internalised through the various direct and indirect negotiation processes that created the global development goals Covid 19 Ebola and HIV AIDS are prime illustrations of the fact that health is supremely political Governments whether they are local national international or multilateral make decisions about their policy responses coordinate their response and channel the necessary resources Such decisions are informed by local and global conditions as well as sets of values norms and standards that determine policy and interventions As states and regions become more interconnected the politics of health are increasingly relevant to the sustainable future envisioned by global governance This book explains how considerations of global health have come to inform and infuse the United Nations development agenda It identifies processes actors institutions and interactions in global health by analysing two related case studies the Millennium Development Goals and the Sustainable Development Goals Providing an overview of and insights about the context of global development thinking and practice the subtleties of global health and global health governance this book is an innovative contribution to the literature It is suitable for students and scholars of global health development studies and international relations Displacement, Development, and Climate Change Nina Hall, 2016-03-22 This book focuses on one critical challenge climate change Climate change is predicted to lead to an increased intensity and frequency of natural disasters An increase in extreme weather events global temperatures and higher sea levels may lead to displacement and migration and will affect many dimensions of the economy and society Although scholars are examining the complexity and fragmentation of the climate change regime they have not examined how our existing international development migration and humanitarian organizations are dealing with climate change Focusing on three institutions the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees the International Organization for Migration and the United Nations Development Programme the book asks how have these inter governmental organizations responded to climate change And are they moving beyond their original mandates given none were established with a mandate for climate change It traces their responses to climate change in their rhetoric policy structure operations and overall mandate change Hall argues that international bureaucrats can play an important role in mandate expansion often deciding whether and how to expand into a new issue area and then lobbying states to endorse this expansion They make changes in rhetoric policy structure and operations on the ground and therefore forge frame and internalize new issue linkages This book helps us to understand how institutions established in the 20th century are adapting to a 21st century world It will be of great interest to scholars and students of International Relations Development Studies Environmental Politics International Organizations and Global Governance as well as international officials
