Rewriting Magic Claire Fanger,2015-06-18 In Rewriting Magic Claire Fanger explores a fourteenth century text called The Flowers of Heavenly Teaching Written by a Benedictine monk named John of Morigny the work all but disappeared from the historical record and it is only now coming to light again in multiple versions and copies While John s book largely comprises an extended set of prayers for gaining knowledge The Flowers of Heavenly Teaching is unusual among prayer books of its time because it includes a visionary autobiography with intimate information about the book s inspiration and composition Through the window of this record we witness how John reconstructs and reconsecrates a condemned liturgy for knowledge acquisition the ars notoria of Solomon John s work was the subject of intense criticism and public scandal and his book was burned as heretical in 1323 The trauma of these experiences left its imprint on the book but in unexpected and sometimes baffling ways Fanger decodes this imprint even as she relays the narrative of how she learned to understand it In engaging prose she explores the twin processes of knowledge acquisition in John s visionary autobiography and her own work of discovery as she reconstructed the background to his extraordinary book Fanger s approach to her subject exemplifies innovative historical inquiry research and methodology Part theology part historical anthropology part biblio memoir Rewriting Magic relates a story that will have deep implications for the study of medieval life monasticism prayer magic and religion A Companion to The Book of Margery Kempe John Arnold,Katherine J. Guffey,2019-10-10 The images in the book of Revelation confound even the most seasoned of interpreters In this book Andrew R Guffey argues that part of the confusion stems from the fact that the book of Revelation was first and foremost a work to be seen but that few interpreters address the visibility of the book The Book of Revelation and the Visual Culture of Asia Minor describes a connection between rhetorical discussions of ekphrasis visual culture and John s images a concurrence of images using theory and thick historical description Guffey s analysis situates the text and its rhetorical performativity in the context of ancient visual and rhetorical culture arguing that Revelation is not merely a work of literary craft but also of visual culture
