1. Do the student's present level of academic achievement and functional performance (PLAAFP) statements in the IEP lead the ARD committee to conclude that the student is multiple years behind grade-level or course expectations and will not progress at the same rate and level of rigor as their non-disabled peers? STAAR Modified is intended for a small number of students receiving special education services whose disability significantly affects their academic progress in certain subjects or courses, such that they will not reach proficiency for these subjects or courses in the same time frame as their nondisabled peers. To determine whether a student meets this criterion, an ARD committee should review the PLAAFP statements in the IEP. PLAAFP statements are the basis of the IEP because they define where a student currently is, both academically and functionally, and should provide the ARD committee with sufficient information to determine the student's skill level.
