Turkish Intelligence and the Cold War Egemen Bezci, 2019-10-31 Turkish Intelligence and the Cold War examines the hitherto unexplored history of secret intelligence cooperation between three asymmetric partners specifically the UK US and Turkey from the end of the Second World War until the Turkey's first military coup d'état on 27 May 1960 The book shows that our understanding of the Cold War as a binary rivalry between the two blocs is too simple an approach and obscures important characteristics of intelligence cooperation among allies Egemen Bezci shows that a pragmatic approach offers states new opportunities to protect national interests by conducting intelligence diplomacy to influence crucial areas such as nuclear weapons and to exploit cooperation in support of their own strategic imperatives This study not only reveals previously unexplored origins of secret intelligence cooperation between Turkey and West but also contributes to wider academic debates on the nature of the Cold War by highlighting the potential agency of weaker states in the Western Alliance to their domestic politics Yet despite this very little scholarly attention has been paid to the relationship between intelligence and politics in any Arab state This book examines how security apparatus and intelligence influenced the domestic politics of Tunisia from the implementation of French Protectorate in 1881 to the aftermath of the independence up to 1965 Based on unprecedented access to the sources of the Ministry of Interior and the First Ministry during Bourguiba s regime as well as the national diplomatic and military archives of France Italy and the United Kingdom the book is the first to trace the evolution of the Tunisian security community Omar Safi argues that from an apparatus designed to maintain colonial control intelligence became an instrument to drive the political agendas of the ruling elite The book sheds new light on the influence of intelligence presenting it as the fundamental and generally ignored missing dimension of North African domestic politics
