Simon Blunt Jeffrey Funnell, Tim, 2014-03 Insurance is dull isn't it Not when you're a broker at Lloyd's Simon Blunt takes us behind the scenes at that famous establishment and whilst tracking the early days of Simon as a trainee broker we can witness the way insurance deals are negotiated and millions of pounds staked with virtually only a verbal agreement and minimum of paperwork One such deal goes dramatically wrong when 22.6 million worth of jewellery en route to a Saudi princess as a wedding present is stolen only days after Lloyd's had agreed to insure it Whilst agreeing immediately to honour its financial commitments Lloyd's sets out to track down the missing jewellery and the thieves The search becomes even more intense when one of the missing couriers given the task of escorting the jewellery is found murdered Lloyd's police forces from England and Europe along with a private security company all cooperate in their endeavours to track down the thieves and murderers The investigation is meticulous but will their combined efforts be sufficient to track down the perpetrators and the mastermind behind the theft

Working-Class Writing Ben Clarke, Nick Hubble, 2018-11-19 This book updates our understanding of working class fiction by focusing on its continued relevance to the social and intellectual contexts of the age of Trump and Brexit The volume draws together new and established scholars in the field whose intersectional analyses use postcolonial and feminist ideas amongst others to explore key theoretical approaches to working class writing and discuss works by a range of authors including Ethel Carnie Holdsworth Jack Hilton Mulk Raj Anand Simon Blumenfeld Pat Barker Gordon Burn and Zadie Smith A key informing argument is not only that working class writing shows working class to be a diverse and dynamic rather than monolithic category but also that a greater critical attention to class and the working class in particular extends both the methods and objects of literary studies This collection will appeal to students scholars and academics interested in working
