As in the last edition, Chapter 2 introduces quantitative comparison methods. After classifying countries as low-income, lower-middle income, upper-middle income, high-income OECD, and other high-income countries (in accordance with the World Bank's income classification structure), Purchasing Power Parity (PPP) is explained as a tool to make more accurate comparisons between countries based on income level. As an alternative to the World Bank's classification based on income, Chapter 2 looks at other key development factors such as education and gender inequality, mainly through an introduction to the Human Development Index and how it is calculated. This edition also introduces students to the new Human Development Index and how it differs from the original HDI. It emphasizes the calculations of these two indexes and how a nation's income level is often not consistent with its HDI or NHDH. Numerous new country comparison tables were added to better illustrate this point.

As in the 11th edition, the 12th emphasizes the similarities among developing countries. The chapter stresses ten key similarities of developing countries:

- Low levels of living and productivity
- Low levels of human capital
- High levels of income inequality and absolute poverty
- High rates of population growth
- Social fraternization
- Large rural population with rapid rural-urban migration
- Low levels of industrialization
- Adverse geography
- Underdeveloped financial systems and markets
- Lingering colonial impact and external dependence

Within the discussion of these similarities are highlights of the diversity among developing nations despite their commonalities.

The chapter goes into greater detail when discussing that developing countries began modern economic growth with initial conditions much different from those of the developed countries. In comparison to the position of the developed countries on the eve of their development, many of today's LDCs have:

- more limited natural resource endowments.
- lower per capita incomes.
- a less temperate climate and possibly unfavorable geographic conditions.
- larger population sizes and growth rates.
