Peterson,2002 The change from a hunting gathering lifestyle to one dependent upon farming constitutes a truly revolutionary event in the human career Most archaeologists agree that how ancient people organized their work and family groups was crucial to the success of early attempts at farming Yet little serious attention has been paid to the social organization of labor in the prehistoric past This book addresses that lacuna by investigating sexual divisions of labor As a case study Peterson chose the southern Levant of West Asia where the world's first farming societies emerged some 10 000 years ago Shattering long held assumptions about women's work that lead to generalizations about gender roles Peterson shows that gender studies can be both scientific and thoroughly grounded in feminist theory

Reinners,Kenneth L. Driese,2004-07-08 William Reinners and Kenneth Driese introduce a conceptual framework for studying the propagation of ecological influences across landscapes They also provide examples of models that describe and predict propagation Their volume is an excellent graduate level introduction to the field of landscape ecology which is concerned with the effects of spatial patterns on ecological processes especially the movement of organisms abiotic materials and energy across landscapes

the ways in which scientists analyze and interpret data and models Many of these are emerging as a result of the wide availability of inexpensive high speed computational power In particular hierarchical Bayes and Markov Chain Monte Carlo methods for analysis provide consistent framework for inference and prediction where information is heterogeneous and uncertain processes are complex and responses depend on scale Nowhere are these methods more promising than in the environmental sciences Models have developed rapidly and there is now a requirement for a clear exposition of the methodology through to application for a range of environmental challenges

Statistical Analysis of Epidemiologic Data Steve Selvin, 2004-05-13 Analytic procedures suitable for the study of human disease are scattered throughout the statistical and epidemiologic literature Explanations of their properties are frequently presented in mathematical and theoretical language This well established text gives readers a clear understanding of the statistical methods that are widely used in epidemiologic research without depending on advanced mathematical or statistical theory By applying these methods to actual data Selvin reveals the strengths and weaknesses of each analytic approach He combines techniques from the fields of statistics biostatistics demography and epidemiology to present a comprehensive overview that does not require computational details of the statistical techniques described For the Third Edition Selvin took out some old material e g the section on rarely used cross over designs and added new material e g sections on frequently used contingency table analysis Throughout the text he enriched existing discussions with new elements including the analysis of multi level categorical data and simple intuitive arguments that exponential survival times cause the hazard function to be constant He added a dozen new applied examples to illustrate such topics as the pitfalls of proportional mortality data the analysis of matched pair categorical data and the age adjustment of mortality rates based on statistical models The most important new feature is a chapter on Poisson regression analysis This essential statistical tool permits the multivariable analysis of rates probabilities and counts
