

How to Survive

the zombie apocalypse

Have a 72 hour kit prepared and packed into a comfortable backpack ready to go at a moments notice. Water, food, iodine tablets, flash-light, batteries, first aid kit, earplugs, matches, good hiking boots, tarp, sleeping bag, 3 sets of extra clothes, swiss army knife and twinkies.

Figure out your weapon of choice. The best way to kill a zombie is to decapitate it, so you want something sharp: ax, knife, shovel, or a samurai sword all work well. However, distance is always better than close combat, so if you are good with a gun or bow stock up on the ammo - you can never have too much ammo.

Keep in shape. You know what they say, the number one rule during the opocalypse is CARDIO. When the ammo runs out, or you get caught off guard you have to be able to outrun a zombie..., or at least outrun the guy next to you.

Get out of highly populated areas, and especially anywhere close to a hospital or medical clinic. The first place everyone will go when scratched, bit or feeling sick is a medical facility of some kind. The zombie virus will spread the quickest in these areas.

Assemble your team. Here are the important people to have on your side: a strong leader, a medical professional, someone who is wise and can give good counsel, a warrior to protect the group, a caregiver who can comfort everyone when things are looking down, and of course the plucky comic relief.

Find shelter and make a good stronghold. A rural area is best (see get out of populated areas). Your location should be close to water and a food source. Secure the perimeter and build a crows nest - something that is high enough to see 360 degrees.
