Non-prototypical Clefts in French Lena Karssenber,2018-09-24 This monograph is the first large scale corpus analysis of French il y a clefts While most research on clefts focusses on the English prototypical it cleft and its equivalents across languages this study examines the lesser known il y a clefts of both presentational eventive and specificational type and provides an in depth analysis of their syntactic semantic and discourse functional properties In addition to an extensive literature review and a comparison with Italian c clefts and with French c'est clefts the strength of the study lies in the critical approach it develops to the common definition of clefts Several commonly used criteria for clefts are applied to the corpus data revealing that these criteria often lead to ambiguous results The reasons for this ambiguity are explored thus leading to a better understanding of what constitutes a cleft In this sense the analysis will be of interest to specialists of Romance and non Romance clefts alike The Role of Functions in Syntax Zygmunt Frajzyngier,Erin Shay,2016-03-10 The main aim of this book is to address a fundamental question in linguistics namely why languages are similar and why they are different The study proposes that languages are fundamentally similar when they encode the same meanings in their grammatical systems and that languages are different when they encode different meanings Even if languages encode the same meaning they may differ with respect to the formal means used to code those meanings This approach allows for a typology based on functional domains subdomains and functions coded in individual languages The outcome of the study is a unified approach to language theory linguistic typology and descriptive linguistics The argumentation for the hypotheses and the proposed approach is supported by analyses of data from more than a dozen languages including English Polish French

Wandala Mina Hdi and several other Chadic languages The study is accessible to a wide variety of linguists
