Environmental Planning in the Netherlands: Too Good to be True Gert de Roo,2017-03-02 The Netherlands is one of the most prominent and innovative countries in the field of environmental planning Over the past decade its government has introduced such ground breaking schemes as Integrated Environmental Zoning the City Environment Project the Bubble Concept and Policy Concepts and new approaches to coping with noise odours soil pollution air pollution and safety issues

These initiatives and policy tools reflect a rapidly changing and decentralising environmental policy which contrasts with more conventional environmental ideologies. However, at present little is known of these policies in the international arena. De Roo shows how and why in recent years the country's planning system has moved away from its traditional top down structure. The resulting changes have had far reaching consequences for the traditional principles of Dutch environmental policy. In addition, measures for compensating excessive environmental loads are now open to discussion and environmental quality is a subject of negotiation among stakeholders. All these developments mean that environmental policy making has become more closely integrated with local initiatives that focus on general location specific qualities. In this book this development is referred to as tailor made comprehensive planning which relates closely to the local context, is area specific, situation dependent and embraces shared governance.

Land Too Good for Indians John P. Bowes, 2016-05-10 The history of Indian removal has often followed a single narrative arc: one that begins with President Andrew Jackson's Indian Removal Act of 1830 and follows the Cherokee Trail of Tears. In that conventional account the Black Hawk War of 1832 encapsulates the experience of tribes in the territories north of the Ohio River. But Indian removal in the Old Northwest was much more complicated, involving many Indian peoples and more than just one policy event or politician. In Land Too Good for Indians historian John P. Bowes takes a long needed closer, more expansive look at northern Indian removal and in so doing amplifies the history of Indian removal and of the United States. Bowes focuses on four case studies that exemplify particular elements of removal in the Old Northwest. He traces the paths taken by Delaware Indians in response to Euro American expansion and U.S. policies in the decades prior to the Indian Removal Act. He also considers the removal experience among the Seneca, Cayugas, Wyandots and other Indian communities in the Sandusky River region of northwestern Ohio. Bowes uses the 1833 Treaty of Chicago as a lens through which to examine the forces that drove the divergent removals of various Potawatomi communities from northern Illinois and Indiana. And in exploring the experiences of the Odawas and Ojibwes in Michigan Territory, he analyzes the historical context and choices that enabled some Indian communities to avoid relocation west of the Mississippi River. In expanding the context of removal to include the Old Northwest and adding a portrait of Native communities there before, during and after removal, Bowes paints a more accurate and complicated picture of American Indian history in the nineteenth century. Land Too Good for Indians reveals the deeper complexities of this crucial time in American history.

Lost in a Text Message Taylor Keane Crumley, 2008-11 It's funny we can hardly keep up with technology, let alone the language that comes with it: desktop computers, laptops, smartphones, PDAs, mobile phones, push to talk phones, just to name a few. All of these instruments have one common thread: communicating with loved ones and friends using text messaging. Have you ever gotten a message or email you didn't understand and you were left scratching your head? What does that mean? Better yet, you are forced to ask your kids what it means. So go ahead, glean the pages ahead; you will get an idea what your kids and friends are trying to tell you, so you won't be Lost in a Text Message.
